EXCESS PURCHASING POWER?

Following a recent meeting with Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau, congressional leaders charged with responsibility for tax legislation said "every reasonable effort" would be made to enact a tax bill additional 16 billion dollars of revenue.

Meanwhile, it has been reported that the treasury, having examined the estimates of national income and purchasable consumer goods, is preparing a campaign to obtain an average investment of as high as 25 percent in War Bonds to absorb additional excess purchasing power after living expenses and taxes have been deducted from the national income.

The prospect of additional taxes and an accelerated rate of War Bond purchase presumes the existence of a large amount of money in the hands of the people that must be diverted to government spending purposes lest it find its way, as excess purchasing power, into the spiral of inflation. This is clearly part of the official credo of fiscal management.

Yet, the official credo does not square with the public credo; the existence of excess purchasing power—an inflationary gap—is not admitted by the people who theoretically possess the money, or who theoretically are going to possess it sometime within the next few months. Obviously, persons whose incomes have not increased during the war boom and who are unable to accumulate savings or support an expanded scale of living before the boom started do not have excess purchasing power. Whatever they may have gained through inability to make purchases of some kinds has been more than absorbed by the higher prices of the things they must continue to buy.

On the other hand, persons whose incomes have increased under the war boom, the great majority of them in the working class, do not admit that they have excess purchasing power. To the extent that they have increased their margin above subsistence, which has been the experience of many of them, they claim that they are entitled to maintain that margin. In many cases, in fact, they take the position that it should be widened by wage increases to compensate for higher prices.

When it is considered that taxes on the wealthy already are so heavy that even the social reform school seems satisfied, that taxes on the middle class have reached a point where investments frequently must be liquidated to meet them, and that citizens once classified by the New Deal as the "lowest third" regard their increased income as a matter of right, not privilege, the whereabouts of excess purchasing power becomes a first-rate mystery—a statistical abstraction.

Perhaps that is what the congressional leaders had in mind when they spoke of "every reasonable effort" to enact a new tax bill this year. The case for additional taxes based on existence of surplus funds carries no conviction with politicians. The case for additional taxes based on equality of sacrifice from existing income, on the other hand, calls for a degree of firmness in fiscal management that never has existed under the Roosevelt administration.

TURKEY LAYS ITS BETS

Under the rule of secrecy covering military movements, all reports from the new Allied security zone on the Turko-Syrian frontier must be considered unreliable till proved otherwise.

More important, however, than that Allied troops may be doing in the Middle East is what Turkey undoubtedly is doing. It is betting on the Allies to win World War II. Its premier, Sukru Saracoglu, has gone out of his way to profess partisanship for the United Nations.

This ends a contest for favor that began long before the start of the war, when Great Britain and Germany were challenging each other for the favor of the Turkish government. The Turks played their cards well. They maintained their neutrality, pending revealing developments in the war itself.

These developments now have occurred. Turkey is still nominally neutral, but it has left no room for doubt that it has abandoned the possibility of German victory in its diplomatic considerations. From a ringside seat in the war arena, it is betting on Germany to lose.

RATIONING DEADLINES

The frantic rush to buy shoes before the deadline for expiration of the No. 17 coupons is being discussed as an indication of something wrong with the rationing system, but the trouble lies deeper than that. The fault is in human nature.

To be honest, it can't even be called a fault, unless such human frailties as inability to see in the dark or jump 20 feet into the air can be called faults, too. It is a rule of behavior, like the instinct that causes horses to run back to their stalls in a burning barn.

It has cropped out in every experience with rationing deadlines so far and no doubt it will continue to do so. In Ohio, whose highly civilized and well behaved residents have been buying automobile license plates since the turn of the century, the deadline rush 43 years later still was so unwieldy that the deadline had to be postponed. If this state can't overcome human nature in almost half a century, OPA shouldn't be ashamed of making no progress in a few short months.

JUST ONE DARN THING AFTER ANOTHER!

AN ARTICLE FOR SUMMER

More Salt Needed In Hot Weather Diets

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D., true for India and it is not true for most of North America in the summer.

THIS ARTICLE is intended to be read, marked and inwardly digested at the beginning of summer.

I do not know where, or in what particular condition of freedom, imprisonment or servitude Mr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Gandhi will be when this article appears in print. I have mixed emotions about Mr. Gandhi, but I do not intend to deal here with his political, religious, or to any great extent, his dietary views. But as a bio-chemist, even a political bio-chemist, I command Mr. Gandhi wholeheartedly. Some time ago Mr. Gandhi's platform was based on his protest against the British monopoly on salt in India. In this, I think Mr. Gandhi was perfectly correct, certainly so far as India is concerned.

It was shown that this instinctive preference was simply to make up for the salt lost in sweating. The world's sweating record of two quarts in an hour is held by an English coal miner; many of them will lose as much as 18 pounds in a single shift in a hot mine. This would mean about one ounce of salt, to say nothing of the water. Few of us consume more than one-third ounce of salt a day.

A great many cases of heat stroke, and especially the kind that results in cramps in the muscles, are due entirely to loss of salt from the body and one of the first treatments for heat stroke is to get salt and water into the person in good quantities. If they are too sick or unconscious and unable to take it by mouth, it should be given in the veins or under the skin.

In India during the hot weather a person sweats 24 hours a day and to make up the loss, over one ounce of salt per day is needed. Salt is thus an essential component of the diet and a tax on salt is bad biology, as well as bad politics.

ANSWER: Medical science has not exactly decided the answer to these questions. In some cases there are carriers of pneumonia and as you say, when they are run down, the germs in the mouth attack the lungs. Pneumonia is not particularly contagious.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp to Dr. Logan Clendening, 235 E. 45th St., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

SIGNS OF ACTION IN BALKANS

RUMANIA's recent peace overtures, the closing of the border between Syria and Turkey behind which the British 9th and 10th armies have been assembling, and rumors that Turkey may break with the Axis indicate that the Balkans may soon see an active fighting front. Regardless of Turkey's position, the British Near East forces may be ready to strike through Crete and the Balkan peninsula. This is a section to watch as invasion develops.

THAT MAN IS MINE by May Christie

CHAPTER SIXTEEN
Soon they were speeding along the ocean boulevard. Julia sat forward, her eyes on the road and the ditches. She breathed a little more freely after the first few miles.

"Give me a cigarette, will you?" she asked him presently.

He did so, lighting it for her. She took a couple of deep inhalations.

She said jerkily: "You know, Vince is simply crazy about Ann. He intended to propose to her tonight. If she's refused him, it would make him twice as reckless in his driving! That's why I'm so scared!"

After a moment's silence, Jim said, in a toneless voice: "I understand she was a great friend of Hank Bruger's."

"What?" Julia swung round. "That gigo! That penniless chaser of rich divorcees? Are you crazy?"

"No. But they dance a great deal together, I understand." He didn't add: "and gamble together." But he was still wondering....

"Phooey! That's part of her job! She has to be seen around to show off her firm's gowns. And if there's any better way to show them than on the fashionable dance-floors, partnered by a male panic at the rhumba and the tango, maybe you'll suggest one?" snapped Julia.

"Ah! that's how it is!" he said, in a non-committal tone.

"Strikes me," said forthright Julia, "you're somewhat of a greenhorn."

He admitted: "I'm not versed in social affairs."

"Really?" drawled Julia, annoyed with him. "I thought you were having yourself quite a time with Mrs. Avery Willard!"

He didn't make any come-back. She went on: "For your information, it isn't my sister who's interested in Hank. She's not that much of a fool! It's Mrs. Willard who's enamored of him! Don't you know her dear sweet friends call her 'Love-a-little-Lotus'?"

If she hadn't been so unnerved, Julia would never have gone so far. She felt a little guilty after she had said it, because she had enjoyed Mrs. Willard's hospitality on a number of occasions.

Jim made no comment, however.

She couldn't know what was going on in his mind. That a certain illumination had come to him, remembering Lotus immundic in the ballroom, about Ann and Hank Bruger!

The thought struck Julia that maybe there was a mutual attraction between her sister and Jim? Maybe they'd had a quarrel in the garden? Maybe that was the reason for Ann's abrupt departure and his reluctance to accompany her in pursuit of the couple?

This attraction must be nipped at once. Jim was a detriment to Julia's plans.

"I think my sister is very fond of Vince," wily Julia told him. "It would be a splendid match for her. We both hate poverty!"

Their car pulled up at the courtyard. They saw a small crowd standing about two cars. One was Vince's, its front fender broken. Terrified her sister might be hurt, Julia dashed up the stairs to the apartment. Jim followed her. A strange man was banging at their door....

Julia didn't wait to ask him what he wanted at this hour of the night. She put her key in the door and pushed in.

Vince was alone in the living-room, hammering on the bed-room door, shouting: "Ann! Let me in!" rattling the door-knob, while indignant cries from neighbors came through the open windows.

It was bedlam let loose. And the stranger had followed them into the living-room, too! He and Vince commenced loud imprecations at each other. And then the bed-room door flew open, and Ann, pale and tear-stained, stood in the opening, crying hysterically: "Get out! Get out of my apartment, all you men! I hate you!"

Next morning Julia awoke before Ann did. For Ann, who had worked hard, had been given the entire Saturday off today.

Julia slipped out of bed and thrust her feet into straw-soled mules. It was a good thing Ann still slept. She needed a rest, after last night's hysteria.

Of course, reflected Julia, Ann had been fool!

First, by giving up Vince's gorgeous gown. (Julia, however, had been the gainer.)

Second, by denying herself the jolly dinner on his yacht. Moping at home.

Third, by cutting short her evening's fun at The Raton. The insanity of that mad ride home with Vince. Even a child could have spotted he was far too tight to handle a car.

Four, by goading him into further recklessness on the ride by refusing to marry him. That was idiotic on two counts. He was a fine financial catch. And anyhow, she could have kicked him along until she reached the safety of her home.

Five, by throwing that temperamental ace, ordering the men out of the apartment with a tearful: "I hate you!"

You had to be practical and level-headed, in these times.

Not even to herself would Julia admit that her annoyance with Ann carried a tinge of jealousy.

With her long golden hair sweeping the pillow, and violet shadows under her closed eyes, Ann would have been the joy of any artist who was the Sleeping-Beauty—a role which would never be offered to Julia.

Julia reflected that she herself had managed Vince perfectly, acting as mediator between him and the incensed owner of the damaged car. She flattered Vince on his sense of justice and his honesty, to the point where Vince had hauled out his check-book, and grandiosely written, in almost illegible hand (but then his bank was accustomed to his scribbles) a check for $75 which he handed to the owner of the car, the name on whose driver's license was Roger T. Upton.

This done, she had then asked Jim to see Vince safely aboard.

"Drive the car for him, Mr. Brent," she had said in an aside, "and have the guard at the pier signal for the tender."

Jim agreed to do this.

"And when you're actually put him on the yacht and into his valet's ever-loving care, use Vince's car to get back to Opaloska. Or maybe," said Julia, who rather regretted her small distaste against Mrs. Avery Willard (who was very useful to the sisters), "you should go back to The Raton and rejoin the others?"

He looked non-committal. He wasn't, she reflected, the sort of man one could boss and direct. No doubt that appealed to Ann. That, and his good looks, with the romance of his calling, and a certain aloof quality about him. It was all very annoying.

Now, this Saturday morning as Julia drank her cup of coffee, she heard the sound of feet coming up the stairs. She grabbed her negligee, and padded to the door, peering cautiously through the tiny gridded window for fear of any more male disturbers of the peace living thus early.

It proved to be a delivery boy carrying a very long cardboard box. She opened the door. She put her forefinger to her lips, enjoying quiet, for she didn't want Ann to be awakened.

The box was labelled: Miss Ann Foster. Two dozen long-stemmed American Beauties were inside. Also a small envelope in Vince's handwriting.

"His peace offering!" she told herself.

It would afford her further ammunition with Ann. There wasn't any token from that stuck-up Jim Brent. It was poor Vince, hanging over all, who was a pushover for punishment!

Julia filled several tall vases with water, and carefully arranged the flowers. She would see to it that, when her sister woke, she'd find herself in a bower of roses.

"Even though my life is no bed of roses," she thought bitterly. Life was unfair, giving hands enough to those who hadn't sense enough to grab them, while depriving those who would leap at them.

Roses in front of the softly billowing lace curtain at the bedroom window, stately and proud. Roses atop the bureau, where Ann's waking eyes would first light on them. On either side of the vanity's mirror, each in a crystal specimen vase, one super blossom. And half-a-dozen roses spraying from a blue glazed bowl on the small night-table between the two beds.

Julia saved one flower for the breakfast-tray she would prepare. For she would coddle Ann this morning. She would try new tactics with her sister on behalf of Vince, since arguing and nagging didn't get you anywhere.

On the gate-legged little tray, Julia placed a square of yellow linen, and the little breakfast set of Mexican pottery. In her capacity as air stewardess, she was well in for noisier vacations, but in a busy time we hanker for quiet holidays.

Even the word "streamlined" has, in its popular use, assumed a new and truer meaning. It used to mean de luxe, patrician, full of fancy trimmings; today it suggests something slim, practical, trimmed of all excess. Our sterner times have brought new realism into "streamline," and every traveler secretly feels that his civilian sacrifices have turned a good word into a better.

In the Canadian Rockies, summer hotel luxury is gone for the war's duration, but Banff and Lake Louise remain the region's twin capitals. The Canadian Pacific Railway brings the vacationist to these as to other points in the Dominion, but urges the traveler to reserve space in good time, for passenger facilities are not as ample as in former years. From Eastern seaboard cities the tourist can go to Montreal or Toronto, whence the C. P. R.'s main line proceeds direct to Chicago, St. Paul and Moose Jaw to Banff.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Gilson, a graduate of Salem High school, class of '39, is employed at the government ordnance plant at Lordstown.

Mr. West is a graduate of Salem High school, class of '38, and is now a senior at Ohio State university.

Friends Church Class Is Entertained

Mrs. Walter Shallenberg entertained members of the Elizabeth Frye Missionary society of the Friends church last evening at her home on the Depot rd.

The president, Mrs. Robert Mosher, had charge of the business session after which a guest, Mrs. William Yengling of Glendale, Calif., told of the work done in the church there.

The next meeting will be held July 9 with the place to be announced later.

Farewell Party Honors Soldier

A farewell party in honor of Charles Smith, who is leaving Tuesday for the army, was given last evening at the home of Miss Joyce Shaffer on Jennings ave.

A scavenger hunt was a feature of the evening with Elizabeth Stewart, Velma Kosci, Richard Butler and Kent Mayhew as the winners. Mr. Smith received several gifts and refreshments were served by Mrs. William Schaffer, assisted by his mother, Mrs. Leora Smith.

Wedding Anniversary Is Celebrated

Mrs. Ella Ferrall entertained a number of friends recently honoring the 20th wedding anniversary of her niece and nephew, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Burrier of Franklin st.

The table was decorated with red, white and blue and centered with a large anniversary cake.

The evening was enjoyed playing "500" with prizes going to Mrs. Maude Knisley, Edward Jensen and John Davidson.

Jacqueline Troll Is Hostess

A wiener roast was enjoyed by members of Group 9 of the Methodist Women's Society of Christian Service last evening at the home of Jacqueline Troll on Vine ave.

Games were enjoyed and Mrs. F. C. Troll assisted in serving refreshments.

The next meeting will be a hike July 16.

Churches To Join
In Picnic July 16

Plans were made for a picnic to be held at 12:30 p. m. July 16 at Centennial park when the executive committee of the Federation of Churches and representatives of various churches met at the Memorial building yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Andrew Drotleff will serve as chairman.

Party Planned For Thursday

The December committee of the Women's association of the Presbyterian church, with Miss Sarah Walker and Mrs. E. S. Vincent as chairmen, will hold a get-acquainted social at 2:30 p. m. Thursday at the home of Mrs. Vincent, 1511 E. Third st.

Band Mothers Plan
Tuesday Outing

Plans were made for a cover-dish dinner for members of Salem High school band when the Band Mothers association met Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Arthur Lind on the Lisbon rd. The dinner will be held at 6 p. m. Tuesday at the Salem Country club.

Favor CIO Union

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The Labor Relations board reported today that production and maintenance employees of the Superior Coach corporation's Lima, O., plant had selected the CIO United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers, Local No. 711, as their collective bargaining agent.

The board said an employee election last June 4 gave the CIO union 274 votes and the AFL Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers and Helpers 58 votes. Nine ballots were cast for neither union.

Greater use of wild game was only one of the means which the secretary of the interior suggested could be used between now and 1947 to add enough food to the nation's pantry to feed 10,000,000 persons a whole year.

Senator Allen J. Ellender, the Louisiana gourmet, commented that Ickes certainly was on the right track when he commanded a prospective annual supply of 1,100,000 pounds of muskrat, 440,000 pounds of raccoon and 220,000 pounds of opossum to the attention of American diners.

Ellender, a veritable fugleman among muskrat eaters, particularly applauded the thought of a raccoon in every pot.

"A coon stew is good," he said contemplatively, "but a coon roasted with sweet potatoes, and with lots of rich gravy—my, my!"

Reported Ohio Gas Cut Mistake, Say Officials

DAYTON, June 19.—Lewis C. Cook, rationing officer here, today termed "all a mistake" reports he had said commercial vehicles in the nine-county Dayton area would get 40 per cent less gasoline after July 1.

The entire report either was a mis-statement or I was unfortunately not sufficiently clear in a conversation with reporters," Cook said.

His statement followed a joint denial by the regional Office of Price Administration and Office of Defense Transportation in Cleveland that any reduction in gasoline allowances were contemplated at present in Ohio.

ALL-BLACK AFTERNOON FROCKS SMART RIGHT NOW

Very new and newsworthy right now are the all-black afternoon dresses that may be worn to luncheon or an evening party with equal charm. They are styled in luscious jet black fabrics such as tissue faille, crepes and sheers, and combine smooth simplicity with soft flattery. The coat dress, left, is made of rayon tissue faille in deep black. The saddle-stitched self fabric buttons, brief cap sleeves and new lowish, round neckline are style details. The model in the center is fashioned of jet black tissue faille with bateau-necked bodice and flared skirt. Floppy self fabric bows add flattery to shoulders and waistline. The long-sleeved version, right, is made of fine black rayon sheer crepe. Saw-toothed detail on the buttoned V-necked bodice is repeated in three-tiered effect on the front-fitted skirt. The buttons are white, and a pretty white flower and white gloves are worn with it.

Miss Rena Heestand is quite ill at the home of her niece Mrs. Rena Evans of R. D. 3, Alliance.

Greater use of

"YOU'VE DONE YOUR BIT NOW DO YOUR BEST!"

DURING the first year of our toughest war, we—

Trained millions of fighting men—made millions of dollars worth of fighting tools—built millions of tons of shipping to carry these men and tools to the fighting fronts.

And to help pay for it all, we bought War Bonds. Altogether, 50 millions of us bought War Bonds. And nearly 30 millions of us started putting, on the average, 10 percent of our pay into War Bonds every payday through the Payroll Savings Plan.

That was a good start—a whale of a good start. But every American knows that it was only a start. Nobody would contend for a single instant that what we did in '42 is enough for '43!

Did we make 48,000 planes last year? Believe it or not—we did. But we've got to make 100,000 this year! Sure! We broke every record in the world last year, building 8 million tons of shipping. But everybody knows that the 18 million tons we're building this year isn't enough!

We've got to do more fighting this year. We've got to do more building, more training, more shipping—and more saving.

We've got to buy more War Bonds.

Is that too much to ask? Many of us are making more money than we have made for years. The things we'd like to buy with that money have either disappeared or are as "scarce as hen's teeth." So, why not put that money into War Bonds at good interest—$4 for every $3 when the Bonds mature? Money to help pay for the war—keep prices down—provide peacetime jobs and peacetime goods and a generally decent world for all of us when the war is won.

Chances are, you're already in the Payroll Savings Plan—buying War Bonds—doing your bit. But don't stop there. See if you can't boost your ante! Do your best!

How millions of Americans have done their bit—and how they can do better:

Of the 34 million Americans on plant payrolls, nearly 30 millions of them have joined the Payroll Savings Plan. (If you aren't in yet—sign up tomorrow!)

These Americans who have joined the Plan are investing, on the average, 10 percent of their earnings in War Bonds. (If you haven't reached 10 percent yet—keep trying!)

BUT...

America's income this year will be the highest in history: about 125 BILLION dollars! In spite of all taxes and price rises, the average worker will have more money than last year—more than ever before!

That is why Uncle Sam has a right to ask us, individually, to invest more money in War Bonds, through the Payroll Savings Plan. He asks us to invest not 10 percent or 15 percent or 20 percent, but all we can!

YOU'VE DONE YOUR BIT --- NOW DO YOUR BEST!

INDIANS DEFEAT WHITE SOX, 5-3, IN 14 INNINGS

Tribe Hopes to Lengthen Victory String Today and Tomorrow

(By Associated Press) CHICAGO, June 19.—Cleveland's sixth-place Indians meet Chicago's seventh-place White Sox twice today and twice tomorrow in an effort to lengthen a victory string already at four in a row.

The Tribe went 14 innings to take a 5 to 3 after-midnight decision from the White Sox yesterday, opening the series. The triumph gave the Tribe its longest list of consecutive wins this season, and boosted them to one game out of third place.

Manager Lou Boudreau named Chubby Dean and Ray Poat to do the pitching chores today, opposing Thornton Lee and Johnny Humphries, both former Cleve-landers. The Indians tallied first 1st night and then saw Chicago surge ahead with three runs in the third. Cleveland runs in the fourth and eighth innings sent the game into overtime.

With one man out in the fourth, Cleveland grouped singles by Ray Mack, Oris Hockett, Boudreau and rookie Pat Seeray to fashion two runs and a ball game.

Vernon Kennedy won his second game of the campaign when he relieved Pete Center in the sixth. Al Smith started on the mound for Cleveland, but folded after the Chicagoans romped over in the third with their only three runs.

Lefty Ed Smith went the route for the Sox, giving up 11 hits. His mates nicked the Cleveland three-times for the same total.

English Derby Won By Straight Deal

(By Associated Press) NEWMARKET, England, June 19.—Straight Deal, a 15 to 1 shot owned by Dorothy Page, one of Britain's most prominent horsewomen, won the historic Derby today by sweeping from fifth place in the last half mile.

The Aga Khan's Umidad was second and his Nashrullah was third.

The favorite, Kingsway, owned by Lord Astor, finished fourth.

The race was worth approximately $16,000 to the winner and was run in a strange setting, stripped of all its pre-war finery.

Meeting With Trotsky

CHICAGO, June 19.—Roger Peckinpah, vice president of the Cleveland Indians, arrives in Chicago today for a conference with Harry Trotsky, who is eager to rejoin the Tribe after a year's layoff because of migraine headaches.

First Baseman Trotsky, whose batting mark averaged .313 during his nine years with the Indians, has been working out at Comiskey park, home of the White Sox.

83,000 Bushels of Wheat Go Down In Collision

British coastal freighter Brewster is shown on its side in the St. Clair river near Algoma, Mich., after colliding with the W. D. Calverly, Jr., of Cleveland. The Brewster, a 250-foot vessel, was loaded with 83,000 bushels of wheat and was bound from Port Arthur, Ontario, to Montreal. All of the crew were saved. (International)

JAP ATTACK STORY TOLD BY REPORTER

Nipponese Came Over Guadalcanal In All Types Of Aircraft

Zero fighters formed a protective screen not liking the abuse meted out to their comrades, and without a thought to safety came hurtling down.

That was just what our boys wanted. Without a moment's delay our fighters roared down from 20,000 feet and sent 32 Zeros into a fiery dash to the sea. The rest of the attack formation beat a hasty retreat toward home. The boys didn't even bother to molest them.

The attack, if it came from Balalale, represented the total strength shown there in the past few days; if it were split between that island and the base of Kahili on Bougainville Island, it was more than 75 per cent of the strength our reconnaissance planes had reported based on those two airports.

U. S. Boys Celebrate

This was the worst beating ever given the Japanese in the Solomons Aug. 7.

There was great hilarity around the Solomons air command tonight. In fact, all hands believe they can attend a movie without interruption.

Surely the Japanese can't take a loss of 77 planes with inscrutable face, and despite the fact that no enemy planes land on the same field from which they took off—an old Luftwaffe trick—it must be a considerable loss of face in Tokyo for every son of heaven must know the tide has turned against Japan.

Our losses from the few bombs that fell were only a tank lighter and one auxiliary aircraft. We'll swap that anytime for 77 aircraft.

Our casualties were mostly minor. As for the Japanese, many of their pilots were burned to a crisp before they hit the water and others were drowned, because the high command still refuses to supply their fanatic fliers with parachutes.

Fritz Kuhn Is Paroled To Federal Authorities

NEW YORK, June 19.—Fritz Kuhn, former national leader of the German-American Bund, was paroled from Clinton prison, Dannemora, N. Y., today by the state parole board for interment by the federal government for the duration of the war.

Kuhn, 47 years old, was convicted in 1939 of grand larceny of Bund funds and forgery and sentenced to two and one-half to five years in prison. He had appeared before the parole board twice previously and both times he was denied his freedom.

Kuhn will be held at the prison until federal agents, armed with a detainer, take him into custody.

Rehabilitation Work In Italy Is Planned

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, June 19.—Plans are being made to give rehabilitation aid to the Italian people when they are freed from Nazi domination, according to Herbert H. Lehman, director of the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation Operations.

The former New York governor also says that extension of rehabilitation to occupied countries "from Norway down to Greece" is receiving "careful consideration because it is of the greatest moment to us and our allies."

Accountants Ind Session

TOLEDO, June 19.—Election of officers today will conclude the 15th annual conference of the Public Accountants Society of Ohio.

President E. J. Gardner of Hamilton declared in opening the conference that a fixed savings program was the only adequate method of curbing inflation and financing the war. He charged that the Office of Price Administration "has been picking on the small business man."

Steel Operations Level

YOUNGSTOWN, June 19.—Steel operations in the Youngstown district will remain unchanged at 97 per cent of capacity next week, although iron production has dropped with the Hubbard blast furnace of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.

Tentative schedules show all three Bessemer, 24 blast furnaces and 76 of the district's 83 open hearths will be in operation next week.

Commander of the U. S. S. Escanaba, coast guard cutter sunk in the North Atlantic, was Lieut. Comdr. Carl Peterson, above, who was lost with his ship. The Navy department said that cause of a terrific explosion which rent the vessel is not known. There were only two survivors. U. S. coast guard photo. (International soundphoto).

Fund To Aid Sponge Iron Plant Survey

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Sen. Senator Nye (R-N.D.) said today action by the senate appropriations committee in approving an expanded program for exploration of new iron ore and coal fields would also result in investigation of the practicability of erecting sponge iron plants in various sections of the country.

The committee increased to $2,750,000 a $149,000 appropriation as approved by the house for investigation of raw material resources for steel production and included an amendment providing for pilot plant construction and operation.

The item is in the Interior department appropriation bill, now awaiting senate action.

One sponge iron plant is now being constructed at Warren, Ohio, with a capacity of 100 tons a day, by the Defense Plant corporation which will lease it to Republic steel, Nye said.

"This program should be a part and parcel of what should be a national policy of looking ahead," Nye declared.

He said that the vast deposits of lignite in North Dakota were also a potential source of gasoline, adding it was estimated 30 gallons of gasoline can be derived from a ton of lignite.

At least 37 chief executives of as many states are scheduled to attend the meeting from Sunday through Wednesday.

Primary conference goals are interstate cooperation in prosecution of the war and sound post-war economic readjustments.

"What is going to happen to the government-owned plants after the war probably will be considered at length," said Bane. "There is likely to be a great difference of opinion, especially among our guest participants."

He referred to a panel discussion Tuesday on post-war reconstruction.
